This fifteen-hour course is designed to help educators gain a greater understanding of dyslexia and how it impacts students in the classroom.

Educators will:

- Experience what it can feel like to be dyslexic in the general education classroom
- Understand the demands of learning that are impacted by dyslexia and how these show up in every classroom
- Learn practical strategies and accommodations to help dyslexic students access content and learning as equally as their peers

Credits available from:

- This course qualifies for 15 hours in standards III and IV towards the Culturally and Linguistically Diverse Learners professional development requirements
- BVSD: Receive instructional seat time credit for 15 hours
- Adams State: Participants in this course can receive 1 graduate credit available from Adams State for an additional fee of $55 paid directly to Adams State
